JULIUS SMITH ALMOST BAGS BIG HERD OF DEER

FOLLOW SIGNS ALL DAY AND FINALLY COME ACROSS BAND OF SHEEP

Julius Smith at one time was a noted deer hunter, but of late he has sworn off following that sport. Now he wouldn't travel a block to kill a whole flock of deer. He has lost his taste for that sport. Yesterday morning Mr. Smith and Al Kelliher left for Jack Longstreet's ranch in search of the elusive venison. Rumor had it that a herd of deer had been seen in that vicinity. So persistent were the rumors that came to Mr. Smith that he decided to make a quiet trip to the vicinity of the stamping ground of the animals, bag a dozen or two and then surprise his friends by returning to town with the game stacked on a freighting team. The two hunters departed early yesterday morning, and after arriving at the scene where the deer were supposed to be herding, separated and started out. After an hour's hunt Kelliher tired and returned to the automobile. Smith continued, and notching some sheep tracks, labored under the impression they were deer signs. He followed the tracks all day and about 5 o'clock in the evening came upon the sheep where they were being guarded by a herder. At that time he was about 25 miles from the automobile. He tried to borrow a horse to make the return trip but no horse was to be had. So he started walking. He arrived at the machine about 10 o'clock last night. It was with difficulty that he entered the car, and BOSTON, Oct. 16.—The Boston Americans won the world's championship this afternoon by defeating the New York Nationals in the deciding game of the series. Matthewson pitched a wonderful game until the final inning when he weakened. The Red Sox were one run behind when they came to the bat in the last half of the tenth. An error by Snodgrass placed Speaker on second with the bases full. Gardner came to the bat and sacrificed to Devore whose throw to the plate was too wide to catch Yerkes.

BOSTON, Oct. 16.—By miffing an easy fly in the tenth inning, Fred Snodgrass cost New York the championship of the world. Matthewson pitched his greatest game. It was a heart-breaking battle for the old master who stood through the game with uncertain support and it is a marvel that the heart, brain and arm could stand the strain. Never was a game kicked away as this in one of the most dramatic finishes ever staged.

For the series the total attendance was 252,032. The total receipts were $490,830. Each of the Boston players will receive $4025. The attendance today was 20,000.

Matthewson and Myers were the batteries for the New York team while Bedient and Cady started out for the Boston. The first two innings resulted in neither side scoring. In the third the Giants made the first run, Devore scoring on Murray's single.

In the fourth, fifth and sixth both sides were shut out. Stahl scored for the Red Sox. Hendrickson batted for Bedient and secured a double bagger, bringing in Stahl and evening up the score. At the start of the eighth Woods replaced Bedient in the box. In the eighth and ninth no runs were scored.

In the tenth Snodgrass went out. Murray doubled and was followed by Merkle, who also doubled, scoring Murray. Herzog fanned and Myers flied out. One run was made.

Engle, batting for Wood, flied to Snodgrass, who muffed the ball. Engle took second when Hooper secured a hit. Yerkes walked. Speaker singled, bringing in Engle and tying the score. Gardner flied to Devore, scoring Yerkes and winning the world's championship for the Boston.

DENIES CHINESE PAPER IS THE OFFICIAL ORGAN OF DEMOCRATS

An emphatic denial was made by a local democrat to the story appearing in yesterday's Bonanza that a Chinese newspaper was the official organ of the democratic party. The story of yesterday referred to the pasting of a Chinese paper on the Bonanza bill board. The work was done by a practical joker. When an inquiry was made as to the nature of the paper, a passerby remarked that it was the official publication of the democratic party. This morning, a democrat, whose sense of humor could not be discerned with a telescope, called up the Bonanza office by telephone. He was somewhat indignant over the story and in the course of the conversation which he carried on, he became peevish and insisted that a retraction be published. He desired it specifically stated that the Chinese paper in question was not the official organ of his party. In making the retraction to appease the wounded vanity of the democrat, we will state that we never believed the story ourselves, although we do know that the Chinese voters of the United States have strongly endorsed the democratic candidate for president. However, the next time a practical joke is carried out in the vicinity of the Bonanza office, and the same appears in print, a carefully prepared chart will also be published to denote the joke for the edification of the individual whose feelings were so ruffled last evening.
